Take on the “Krone Ride to Höll” at the 2018 UCI Road World Championships

One day before the Men Elite 2018 UCI World Champion is crowned in Innsbruck-Tirol (Austria), non-professional cyclists will have the chance to ride the same roads as the stars. The Krone Ride to Höll on 29 September will see 2018 amateurs take on a short but sharp course starting in the heart of Innsbruck and climbing the infamous Höttinger Höll climb to finish above the city.

2.081 hobby cyclist have the chance to participate at the "Jedermannrennen" on the 29th of September.

With sections of up to 28%, the Höttinger Höll is the steepest climb at the 2018 UCI Road World Championships and likely to be the place where the Men Elite Road Race is decided. Italian Vincenzo Nibali, one of the hot favourites for Worlds victory in September, has already been to Tirol to carry out a recon of the final lap, including the ride up Höttinger Höll. His verdict? “This climb reminds me of a mountain bike climb!”

Those wishing to discover what Nibali means, and compare their time up Höttinger Höll with those of the pros, can enter the Ride to Höll. Registration opens at midnight on 8 May and is limited to 2018 participants.

Krone Ride to Höll: The Details

Featuring 291 metres of climbing and a maximum gradient of 28%, the 3.2km course for the Ride to Höll begins in front of the Hofburg imperial palace (the official finish area of the 2018 UCI Road World Championships). The course continues via Rennweg and Herzog-Otto-Straße to the Innbrücke bridge over the River Inn. Riders then proceed up the narrow Höttingergasse - along the same route as the pros - and the winding Schneeburggasse all the way to the finish line at Gramartboden. The fastest male and female rider will be crowned King and Queen of Höll and prizes will be awarded to the top three in the men's and women's categories. The timed section that will determine the final results starts at the Höttingergasse and ends at the finish at Gramartboden.

The registration fee includes a guaranteed place on the start line, food and drink during the race, a day ticket for the Women Elite Road Race (Saturday, 29 September) as well as a goodie bag. All riders who make it to the finish will receive a finisher's medal and a personalised certificate confirming their participation. The registration fee is €49 until 3 June, €59 until 30 June and €69 until 23 September (plus 5% handling fee). The number of starters is strictly limited to 2018. Registration opens at midnight on 8 May. To sign up for the Ride to Höll visit www.innsbruck-tirol2018.com/ride-to-hoell.
